Product Description

ADSS Optical Fiber Cable All Dielectric Single/Double Jacket Outdoor Aerial Cable

Products Description

The All-Dielectric Self-Supporting (ADSS) fiber-optic cables eliminate the requirement for an additional messenger wire or support system for their installation. They incorporate a central conduit or several conduits to house the optical fibers, followed by a covering of aramid fiber layers and an outer protective sheath. Due to their fully dielectric properties, ADSS cables are ideal for installation in areas with substantial electrical interference, such as in proximity to power lines. Commonly deployed for long-distance, high-voltage applications like those over power lines, railways, highways, and rivers, ADSS cables' self-supporting attribute facilitates a more straightforward and cost-effective installation process than traditional fiber-optic cables, by negating the need for supplementary support structures. Furthermore, the use of ADSS cables can diminish the visual impact of overhead fiber-optic installations. In summary, ADSS cables represent a multifaceted, efficient, and durable solution for fiber-optic communications in demanding outdoor environments, with a unique design and construction that make them fit for an extensive range of applications, guaranteeing reliable and high-performance connectivity even in the most challenging scenarios.

Characteristics:

- 1.Metal-free dielectric strength members enhance the cable's structural robustness.
- 2.The tube's exclusive gel delivers fiber protection.
- 3.Central FRP members, complemented by Dupont's aramid yarn filling, ensure the cable's structural strength.
- 4.The cable shows outstanding attenuation, denoting excellent AT performance.
- 5.It upholds stable performance in diverse temperature conditions and has anti-aging properties, decreasing the burden on towers from natural elements such as ice and wind
