Products Description

GYXTC8S Fiber Optic Cable

The GYXTC8S type cable incorporates a 250µm optical fiber encased within a slack tube crafted from a high-strength material, which is then saturated with a hydrophobic gel. This tube is subsequently enveloped with a steel tape that has been coated with a plastic on both sides (PSP), running in a longitudinal direction. To ensure the cable's tightness and its ability to prevent water from moving along its length, a water-blocking substance is interposed between the steel tape and the slack tube. The cable also features a steel strand that is arranged in an octagonal configuration, all encased within a polyethylene jacket.

Features:

1. The cable's steel wire strand boasts an exceptionally high tensile strength, facilitating self-supporting aerial installation and consequently cutting down on the expenses associated with deployment.
2. It exhibits superior mechanical and thermal characteristics.
3. The material of the loose tube is inherently resistant to hydrolysis and possesses considerable strength.
4. The interior of the tube is filled with a proprietary grease that safeguards the fiber.
5. The dual-layer steel strip (PSP) enhances the cable's resistance to moisture.
6. It features a compact diameter, making it lightweight and straightforward to install.
7. It is available in long lengths and is cost-effective.
